"From a series of objects I collected at Lake Sidney Lanier, north of Atlanta, Georgia, in December 2007. The lake is the primary source for Atlanta's drinking water. As the waterline receded due to record-low rainfall, debris that rested at the lake's bottom for decades lay exposed to the open air. Selected by Iconologic, the images were reproduced in the gallery section of Cooper Carry's annual publication titled Here."

"Bringing life to inanimate objects has always intrigued me. While creating these images for the Web site and catalog of Taylor Guitars, I strived to convey the personality of each guitar and illustrate the relationship between musicians and their instruments: evocative, intimate, sensual and precious."
